

Is TV Right About the FBI?

In 2005, approximately ten new television drama series spotlighting the FBI are being/will be aired by the major television networks. Each new dramatic program is the same. A team of FBI agents, made up of a group of beautiful and highly intelligent, yet very tough, male and female, black and white (politically correct) FBI agents is shown to be a group of infallible heroes. They solve the most heinous crimes with fantastic skill. Using forensic science, these FBI “experts” are unbeatable and they are so competent, sincere and sexy. Of course they never deal with terrorists (the television networks have agreed that it is politically correct to ignore terrorism in programming). But are the depictions of the FBI real? No! In fact, the FBI is a provincial, hidebound group of dogmatic, old-time police detectives who are totally controlled by a series of institutionalized leftist agency watchdogs.

Does the FBI have its head screwed on right?

Investigator Paul Sperry has reported some disquieting facts about America's incompetent and traitorous FBI. When linguist Sibel Dinez Edmonds arrived for her first day of work at the FBI, a week after the 9-11 attacks, she expected to find a somber atmosphere. Instead, she saw a big celebration.

Muslim employees offered her cookies filled with dates from party bowls set out in the room where other Middle Eastern linguists with top-secret security clearance translate terror-related communications.

Edmonds knew the dessert is customarily served in the Middle East at weddings, births and other celebrations, and asked what the happy occasion was. To her shock, she was told that the Arab linguists were joyfully celebrating the terrorist attacks on America. Right in front of her FBI supervisor, one translator cheered: "It's about time they got a taste of what they've been giving the Middle East." Those Muslim FBI agents were celebrating the murder of over 2,000 American men, women and children by murderous Muslim terrorists. Those Muslim FBI agents, enjoying high paid jobs denied to taxpaying Americans who are not entitled to affirmative action, were gleefully dancing on the still warm corpses of innocent Americans. Those murdered souls had paid taxes, which in turn paid for US government jobs, which allowed hate-filled foreign scum to insult America by celebrating the murder of its citizens.

Edmonds soon discovered that it was her FBI supervisor's wife who helped organize the office party at the bureau's Washington field office, just four blocks from the J. Edgar Hoover Building. "This guy's wife brought the date-filled cookies for the celebration," Edmonds, 33, recalled. The FBI supervisor who sponsored the week-long hate-party, Mike Feghali, a naturalized U.S. citizen from Beirut, was in charge of the FBI's Turkish and Farsi desks. Feghali's been promoted since then, and now also runs the all-important Arabic desk, which is key to intercepting the next al-Qaida plot. That explains why the FBI has proven incompetent to deal with Muslim terrorists.

The FBI's language service squad is supposedly on the front line in the "FBI's war on terrorism," collecting all foreign language tips, information and terrorist threats to homeland security. Agents act on what the squad translates and reports. The sooner they get the information, the sooner they can thwart terrorist attacks. FBI investigators had missed clues to both the 2001 and 1993 World Trade Center attacks because they were buried in a backlog of untranslated wiretaps and documents in Arabic. FBI incompetence is nothing new.

Despite the backlog, Feghali told Edmonds and other translators to just let the work pile higher, according to Edmonds. Why? Money. She says Feghali, who has recruited Muslim family and friends to work with him at the high-paying language unit, argued that Congress would approve an even bigger budget for them if they could continue to show big backlogs.

"We were told to take long breaks, to slow down translations, and to simply say 'no' to those field agents calling us to beg for speedy translations so that they could go on with their investigations and interrogations of those they had detained," said Edmonds. Edmonds was fired without specified cause by the FBI after she reported breaches in security, mistranslations, sabotage and potential espionage by Muslim FBI colleagues.

She claims Feghali actually tampered with her work to slow her down. "My supervisor went as far as getting into my work computer and deleting almost completed work so that I had to go back and start all over again," she said.

Edmonds, a Turkish-American who is not a practicing Muslim, made the allegations in a 9-page letter to the Senate Judiciary Committee. She also claims that Feghali threatened to sue the bureau for racial discrimination, but dropped the suit once the bureau promoted him, says Edmonds and other sources.

The FBI, which like the army suffers from a severe shortage of Arabic translators, instated a bureau-wide Muslim-sensitivity training program after 9-11. The purpose of that training is to induce FBI managers to be more sympathetic to Muslim terrorists.

Reached by phone at his palatial Maryland home, FBI Muslim supervisor Feghali was brusque and refused to talk about the allegations. "I'm not at liberty to discuss this thing, OK?" he said before abruptly hanging up. "G-man" Feghali has been an FBI language specialist for several years. He was a key translator in the government's case against al-Qaida operatives charged in the U.S. embassy bombing in Kenya, and even testified in court. The Muslim terrorists in that case murdered over 40 people and got away with it after costing America millions of dollars in wasteful court cases. Spokespersons for the FBI's Washington field office, including Debbie Weierman, refuse to return repeated phone calls about the case.

Edmonds has also complained about Feghali and other Middle Eastern translators to the Justice Department inspector general. She gave a detailed briefing to members of the 9-11 commission in a secure room there. She offered evidence that FBI terrorist "investigations are being compromised," and has demanded an independent probe of the FBI's language department. "... persons within the FBI language department that either intentionally prevented translation because of their agendas, or persons who were, and are, not qualified to properly translate, (made it) likely that terrorist communications prior to 9-11 were missed; and it is likely that current and future terrorist communications will likewise be missed," Edmonds wrote Justice's Inspector General Glenn A. Fine in a Jan. 5 letter. "I have alleged, and the FBI has confirmed (to Senate investigators), that there are in fact such persons in the (FBI) language department."

Fine still has not released the findings of his internal probe, even though Edmonds first filed her complaint with his office almost two years ago. Speaking for Fine, Justice official Carol Ochoa said the investigation is "still ongoing." Obviously it is being covered up and buried deep.

Can you imagine the above story being presented in one of those pro-FBI television dramas? One thing is certain; you will never see the truth about the FBI as you have read above. Just remember Ms. Edmonds story is only one of dozens of actual occurrences, which mark the FBI as being the exact opposite as it is presented on television.

Can the FBI do its job? No? Is the FBI an elite crime-fighting agency? Hell No!
