The “Winning Hearts and Minds” Scam

In July 2003, a number of significant leaders of the American Administration met while they were intoxicated with what they believed to be an American victory in the war that Washington claimed to be a war against terrorism (not muslim imperialism). The meeting was held at the National Defense University in Washington, and was attended by Directors from the White House, Diplomats from the State Department, and “experts” in psychological warfare from the Defense Department. The broad-line scenario of the meeting pointed to the anti-American protests that found a fertile land in the Islamic countries so much that those whom Washington considers to be “terrorists” are being looked at as people who love their country, as in the Iraqi situation. But despite the protests, a generation of defenders of democracy until death has sprung up, as was the case in Iran, where Iranian students died in defense of democracy. The participants in that meeting indicated their belief that improving the picture of the United States in the Islamic World is the way toward establishing stable democracies. They also indicated that the United States is no longer going to sit on the sidelines while those whom Washington considers terrorists are fighting for a religious and political future for more than a billion people who believe in it.

The participants in the meeting reached a result stipulating that Washington must make further efforts to influence what they have described as Islamic reform, and that the White House must adopt a new policy based on the idea that American national security requires the United States to play a role in directing the path of the developments in the Islamic World. Also, it must play a role in concentrating the Late Breaking News...

Leftist propagandists are worried that Western Civilization, ultimately led by the Russians or the new Eastern European Bloc, will destroy muslim imperialism and its leftist allies. To head that off, the leftist media has started a rumor that Osama Bin Ladin is dead of typhoid in Pakistan. The left will probably get behind that unsubstantiated rumor before the American elections of 2008. When "the death of bin Laden" becomes a salient media theme, it will be cloaked in the propaganda of martyrdom, mourning and revenge. America's mourning traitors will float all types of attacks on their enemies lamenting the "biological and chemical murder of a great man." The leftist media will also convert Osama's death into a trigger, igniting a major rethink of such notions as "Global War on Terror" (actually its a war against muslim imperialism), which the left claims is forgettable and "no longer relevant." Democrats are already saying, "it is time to forgive and forget 9-11." The left thinks that they can use the "Osama's death" (which may be a lie) to deliver a deathblow to sane Americans who are making great headway with their "clash of civilizations" war cry. It is the left's solid answer to the rhetoric of their enemies, which has begun to slowly turn the guns of the West towards a barrage of annihilation against Islam.

The democrats will say: "Since there is no Osama, there is no international war on terrorism and America must extend the hand of friendship by welcoming new millions of muslim immigrants." Reparations will be offered too. Domestically democrats will use "the death of Osama" to announce the "war is over" and "the building of a new bridge of friendship with international Islam". Billions of US taxpayer dollars will be given to Islam to purchase temporary peace through appeasement. Islamic imperialism will continue to grow until their next bid for swift total domination.

American efforts on these groups, including the moderate Islamic groups, the civil organizations, and the reform groups for the purpose of urging them to adopt democratic values, women's rights, and tolerance toward minorities.

The participants in the meeting pointed to the mistake of the United States during the years that followed the end of the Cold War, when it took the wrong road in its campaign to win the hearts and minds of the sons of the Islamic World, while the various American services at the White House, the Intelligence, or the State Department were insufficiently armed to win "the Battle of Ideas."

There was no one person responsible for this dossier, and no defined security strategy was designed to win that war. That is what Washington tried to catch up with after the attacks of September 11. Since that time, a team composed of members of the American Armed Forces and the Intelligence Services, who are supposedly specialists in studying the psychological aspects, has been formed and tens of millions of dollars were put at their disposal to use in their campaign to influence Islam itself as a religion, and not only to influence the Islamic societies.

The big idea was, as usual, to buy love from the Muslims by giving them billions of dollars of US taxpayer money. The men who will be handing out that money are either leftist traitors who are knowingly helping their nation's enemies or careerist fools who haven't the ability to do anything but hand out money and follow the lead of their more assertive leftist compadres.

Since that meeting was held, Washington has spent tens of million of dollars to finance Islamic broadcasting stations, television programming, and to prepare a curriculum to be taught in the schools of the Islamic World, and has spent millions of dollars on Islamic thinkers who are looked at as representing the Muslim elite, and on holding political workshops in support of moderate Islam, and has built schools and mosques and carried out programs to save what the journalist described in his report as "the Old Quran." (Editor's Note: In truth this project is a scam. In reality it is one of several conduits or pipelines (some covert) for flushing billions of taxpayer dollars into the commodious mouths of Islamic imperialism as appeasement dollars. These appeasement dollars are strengthening the power and influence of Islamic imperialism daily. There were traitors within the US government that financed the Soviet Union for decades before President Reagan shut down the money flow and the USSR collapsed. The Marxist president Clinton opened up a new conduit of funding to the Chinese communists during his reign. During the traitor Bush's reign, billions are being conduited to Islamic imperialism above and beyond the funding realized from maintenance of obsolescent oil based economy.) All of this was planned to be carried out through targeting the Islamic media, the religious leaders, and political parties, and through providing all the money, assets, and human force needed by the American Intelligence service to guarantee the success of its plan to influence the Islamic societies, according to what the American journalist has attributed to a senior official in the American Intelligence. The journalist added that the methods for penetrating Muslim societies included working with armed groups, with the exception of al-Qaeda, in addition to waging secret campaigns to discredit the leaders who are adversaries of the United States.

The participants in the meeting also called for activation of the studies prepared by the American National Security Council, which are hundreds of studies about how to deal with Muslim societies. In addition, they called for establishing a new post for a Deputy National Security Advisor, whose mission is to deal with the societies of strategic interest to Washington. Kaplan added that the war for winning the hearts and minds of the sons of the Islamic societies has been fruitful in raising such hopes as talking about the successful elections held in the Middle East, and the protests and demonstrations against the Syrian presence in Lebanon. That gave the Bush Administration hopes for achieving success. But a number of American experts indicated, according the report, that the problems of the Islamic World are much deeper, and that they are worsening and not getting better.

America's incompetent US generals remain in a position to guarantee that:

- (1) no war will be won unless it is won with conventional, high tech methods
- (2) nation building and other political correctness will remain a salient aspect of all US conflicts
- (3) tight micromanagement control will be steadily reinforced so that generals can better ensure that their combat troops, who they greatly distrust, will remain politically correct
- (4) American armed forces will become less like warfighting units and more like business units
- (5) ever more elaborate lies and fraudulent public relations gimmicks will be developed to ensure that they can displace blame for their own failures.
- (6) bureaucracy and careerism will always prevail above character and military professionalism
- (7) American generals will always be amateurs schooled only in business management concepts
- (8) robots and other machines will replace fighting men or will burden them as enhancers that will bleed combat troops of mobility and problem solving ability
- (9) bias against reconnaissance and intelligence will eventually extinguish all human participation in such essential operational methodologies
- (10) special operations will eventually be totally eliminated
- (11) embedded leftist journalists will have an ever greater influence on US military operations. Every journalist, no matter how callow his stupidity and bogus his loyalty, will be given the rank of major.
- (12) training, organization, weaponry and combat equipment will remain inferior to that of other nations

- (13) high technology will spawn a multitude of useless and too heavy weapons that will reinforce the paralyzation of US armed forces
- (14) US armed forces will be reduced to a lightly-armored, motorized police force unable to defend themselves against enemies equipped with sensible warfighting weaponry, armored and intelligence systems
- (15) Rules of Engagement (ROEs) will be rigidly reinforced by a leftist corps of ROE commissars whose illogical and anti-American bias will drive many patriotic warriors from the armed services. In the meantime ROE commissars punish more and more sincere and law abiding US enlisted men on charges falsely trumped up by foreign and domestic enemies of the USA.
